Scot Taught Madison Thrift

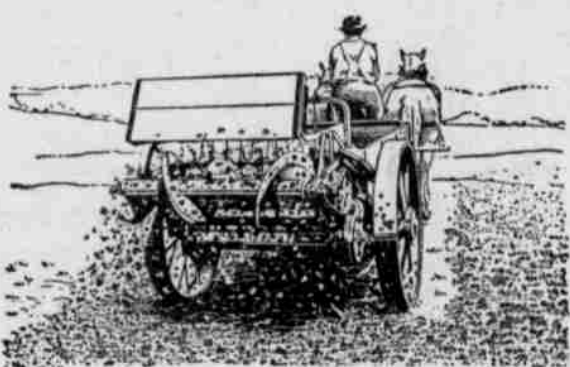

President James Madison often referred to the lessons of thrift taught him when a youth by Donald Robertson, a Scotch schoolmaster.

Thrift and banking go hand in hand. Thrift means banking. Banking means thrift.

Thrift and banking are national slogans today.

Try the Easy Way

WHY neglect the easy way to increase your crops? Everybody knows that stable manure, properly spread, increases crop yields. Practically every farmer owns, or has access to, a manure pile. Put that manure on your fields, where it belongs, but put it on the easy way. Instead of dumping it in piles and then spreading with a fork, doing double work, and wasting manure, use a good spreader and do a better job in less time. Spread a light, even coating of well pulverized manure all over the surface of the soil with a

Low 20th Century Manure Spreader

Proper spreading warms the soil, gives your crop a good start, and furnishes plant food to the growing crop just when and where it is most needed.

The Low 20th Century spreader carries a good big load. It breaks up all lumps and chunks. It gives the manure a double beating and spreads it, as heavy or as light as you wish, wide enough to top dress three rows of corn at once.

There are three sizes—small, medium and large—all light draft machines, all with narrow boxes, all spreading beyond the rear wheel tracks. This is one machine you can depend upon to increase your crop yields this year. Telephone your order, or come in and get a 20th Century spreader. We have them here.

The Biggest Bargain In Town--The Expositor, $1.50

GERMANY HAS CAVED

Yale Fittingly Celebrates the Cessation of Hostilities Last Monday.—Armistice Signed and the Kaiser Sneaks to Holland Between Days.

It's a mighty good thing for Kaiser Bill and his Six Sump Sons that their special train stopped in Holland Sunday instead of coming to Yale, Michigan. They sure would have been mugged up considerable.

That there is something in the old saying, "practice makes perfect," was proven beyond a doubt by Monday's demonstration. The little rehearsal which was held last Thursday only made the people anxious to see the curtain go up for the real show.

At 3:30 Monday morning the Expositor received word that the armistice had been signed. Of course the hour was a trifle early, but the news was so good that we just had to pass it on. There was one place where we didn't trespass, however, and that was near the lair of our city clerk, for Dusty is a holy terror when awakened from his peaceful slumbers, either night or day. After what seemed like hours, the old boy came down town and when he had verified the report to his own satisfaction, he calmly walked to the phone, called No. 13 and said, "twist her tail, boys!" And believe us, the boys were there with the goods.

All this happened at about seven o'clock, and from that time until late in the evening there was a large and varied, continuous, noisy program. There was no work in town, every business place and factory in the city made a little holiday of its own for the occasion and all joined in to make this better than an ordinary celebration. And for a town the size of Yale, we did very well, thank you.

People from the surrounding country were prepared for the news, and when the noise of the sirens whistles and exploding shells, mingled with the shouts of our happy people reached their ears, many of them took the day off and came to town to join in the jollification.

The members of the Yale Cornet Band hastily donned their uniforms and "got in the game," furnishing lots of good music all day.

Everybody fell in line at about 8:30 and, headed by the band, marched to the depot to meet the incoming trains, so the passengers thereon might know that we had heard the news. They must have at least suspected from the happy racket that something had happened.

A huge bonfire was kindled at the corner of Main and Mechanic streets which was kept burning all day and around which there was a happy, jolly crowd, each one trying to make more noise than the one next to him.

In the afternoon an impromptu program was gotten up and a large crowd assembled to listen to the nice words spoken by the pastors of our different churches. The band played a selection which was followed by prayer by Rev. Kelley of the Free Methodist church. Rev. Merrill of the Methodist Episcopal church, gave a very interesting talk and got the people worked up to the proper cheering point, and every time he called for "three and a tiger," it was given with a will. The main address of the afternoon was delivered by Rev. Crandell, pastor of the Methodist Protestant church. It was a truly patriotic speech, which was thoroughly enjoyed by the large crowd which had gathered. His utterances against pro-Germans and suggested punishments for the Imperial family were met with rousing applause.

The program was interspersed with music by the band, singing by the crowd, the Girl Scouts and Elam Sloat, and a reading by Marie McNulty.

There were two specialties on the day's program which would call for more than passing mention did we not lack both time and space. The snare drum playing by Henry Steenburg and mouth organ selections by Elam Sloat called forth much applause from the crowd, and the baby cannon manipulated by Chas. Barr and Geo. Green sure furnished a lot of "pep" for the celebration.

After this part of the day's doings a mammoth parade was formed and the line of march extended through the principal streets of the city.

In the evening the crowd gathered around the fire and the noise went on fast and furious. To make it the "end of a perfect day," an effigy of Kaiser Will was strung up in front of the post office and burned. Shortly after this occurrence a crowd was noticed coming down Main street, headed by the Yale band, which was playing a funeral dirge. Next came six pall-bearers carrying a rough box on the side of which were the words "The Kaiser." This box was placed beside the fire, the lid raised and the crowd invited to take a last look upon the face of the worst murderer the world has ever known—one who started out to rule the world but who now has no place to lay his head, a man without a home or country. After everyone had gazed on this skunk in human form the box was thrown on the fire and another effigy went up in smoke.

The racket was kept up till a late hour when the joy-makers went home, feeling that it was a day well spent.

Loved and Mourned By All

(Tribute paid by Mary H. Coates, principal of the Flint Public School)

Hazel Beadle was an efficient, progressive and painstaking teacher. She had the esteem of her pupils, patrons and associate teachers. She was in every way a young woman of fine qualities, socially and professionally. Personally I feel that I have lost a dear friend as Hazel was always ready to co-operate with whatever she made a success of. I well remember her enthusiasm in Red Cross work, both Junior and the regular Red Cross. It was her delight to work after school with the girls of our department making things for the Belgian Relief work. She filled her place to the fullest measure and it should be a comfort to you both to know that her superintendent or principal never had a criticism in any way, shape or manner. On the contrary it was a pleasure for me to tell Hazel from time to time how much I appreciated her work. Let it be a comfort to you also to know that Hazel's superintendent, principal, and the teachers and pupils all loved her and mourn her loss keenly.

A. N. Cody, superintendent of the Flint Schools, writes these words of comfort to the sad parents:—"I wish to assure you and your family of my deep appreciation of the work and services rendered to our school by your daughter, Hazel. Her untimely death is a great loss to us as she was an excellent teacher, beloved by pupils and associate teachers, and we wish to extend to you our sincere sympathy in this time of bereavement. We cannot understand why she was not permitted to continue in her noble work, but she lived a positive, noble life and the splendid work she has done will live after her. May the Great Comforter abide with you constantly."

Such are the words of comfort, praise and commendation which marks the closing of the beautiful life of Hazel Beadle. She was born in Speaker township, June 26, 1896, to Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Beadle, and was reared and educated in the public school in Melvin until she passed the 8th grade before she attained her twelfth year, and later attended the Yale High School from which she graduated in four years. After completion of a course at Ypsilanti she gained a life certificate to teach. For the past two years she has taught mathematics in the public schools of Flint and was just entering upon her third year when stricken.

Two weeks before her death she was stricken with influenza, which later developed into pneumonia, and it proved that medical aid could not stay the grim reaper from taking this beautiful life which was as a fragrant flower, just blossomed into womanhood, and Monday, Oct. 28th, 1918, she answered the call to make that journey into realms on high, where God will care for His child. The mysteries of life are hard to understand when we see such a brilliant and beloved girl taken from this cold world where every ray of sunshine is needed to cast brightness on the shadows and the gloom, but One who knows and understands these things has far greater work and a reward that comes only to those who deserve it, and He made His call for her to go home and the call was answered.

A week before her death her mother was called from a visit at Niagara Falls to Flint, when her condition became dangerous and she together with her aunt, Mrs. Helena Summers, were with her when the end came. The body was brought to Melvin from Flint the same day of her death.

She leaves besides her sorrowful father and mother, a half-brother, George Beadle, of Port Huron, a half-sister, Mrs. Fred Kettiewell, of Melvin, and a brother in the Aviation Corps of the U. S. A. stationed at Vancouver, Wash., and scores of other relatives and friends.

The funeral was held on Wednesday Oct. 30th, from the farm home near Melvin and interment in Yale cemetery, Rev. J. J. Blackmore, of Melvin, officiating.

The family wish to express their heartfelt thanks for the great kindness and sympathy shown in their great affliction, to those who assisted in the music and to those who contributed their respects through the floral offerings, and to the dear friends in Flint, who extended their kindness and sympathy.

The National Shock Absorber Again

People have been asking us how the Federal Reserve System acts as a shock absorber.

In the past, whenever a shock came the banks felt it first. Most of our 29,000 banks started to strengthen themselves and stopped loaning money, which slowed up business all along the line. We have strengthened ourselves in advance by joining the Federal Reserve System, and when trouble comes can confidently go ahead with our usual business, knowing that the great resources of this System are at our back.

If you are not getting this protection as one of our depositors, drop in and talk it over with us.
